

Riding the Coastline of Iceland

ICELAND ADVENTURE

Geysers, Glaciers and Gravel

Ask an adventurous motorcyclist for his or her “bucket list” of riding destinations, and Iceland is almost guaranteed to be included. There’s a good reason for this: Iceland is one of the wildest and most beautiful, historic, colorful places on earth. Frozen glaciers, towering volcanoes, steaming geysers, and soothing natural hot springs abound on this Arctic island. This is nature at its most primitive: raw and untouched, forged by ice and fire. From a geographical point of view we see a multifaceted country with countless beautiful islands, crystal clear water, rugged mountains and canyons and a never ending coastline. And as motorcyclists we see roads made for riding, sceneries made to enjoy, friendly people, great food and countless places worth stopping to contemplate. Iceland is only available for riding during summer months, so join us in August for an adventure you’ll never forget.

Key attractions include:

- Pingvellir National Park, the only place on earth where the growth and splitting of tectonic plates is visible above water
- The West Fjords – wind along the edges of deep fjords on narrow dirt roads
- Gullfoss, Godafoss, and Dettifoss - some of the most well-known waterfalls in Europe.
- Arctic Circle (almost) - while the Arctic Circle doesn’t actually cross the Icelandic mainland, we will get you as close as we can (within 0.3 degrees!)
- Vatnajökull - the largest glacier in Europe
- A visit to The Great Geysir in southwestern Iceland
- Hekla - Iceland’s most notorious volcano, known as the “Gateway to Hell”
- Eyjafjallajökull – under this glacier lies the volcano whose eruption in 2010 wreaked havoc for air travelers worldwide as its ash plume covered much of Europe.
